Headline:
Dry with sunny spells.

Today:
A dry and bright day across much of the country with the best of the sunshine in the east. Cloudier across the northwest and the Northern Isles with the odd patch of light rain.

Tonight:
Most places having a dry night. Clear periods becoming confined to eastern Scotland as cloudier skies edge across the north and west with a little drizzle. Winds freshening in north.

Monday:
Western Scotland and Northern Isles will be mostly cloudy with a little drizzle. South and east Scotland will have another dry, mild day with some sunshine. Quite windy in northwest.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Rather cloudy on Tuesday with rain later in west. Bright spells and blustery showers on Wednesday and Thursday, most frequent in north and west. Feeling colder in strong southwesterly wind.
